章节摘录

2.4 Translation Practice In a Country Inn After Jerome K. Jerome One day, when George, Harris and I were milking, George remembered a very funny thing that had happened to his father when he was young. His father was travelling with another young man through Wales, and, one night, they stopped at a little inn. There were some other young men there and George's father and his friend joined them and spent the evening with them. They had a very pleasant evening, and sat up late. When time came to go to bed they (George's father and his friend) were a bit tipsy. They were to sleep in the same room, but in different beds. They took a candle with them, and went upstairs. Unfortunately the candle went out when they entered the room, and they had to undress and to find their way to the beds in the dark. It so happened that they both climbed into the same bed, but from different sides, and were lying one with his head, and the other with his feet on the pillow. There was a silence for a moment, and then George's father said: "Joe!" "What's the matter, Tom?" asked Joe from the other end of the bed. "Why, there's a man in my bed," said George's father. "His feet are on my pillow." "Well, it's very strange, Tom," answered the other, "but there is a man in my bed, too!" "What are you going to do with him?" asked George's father. "Well, I'm going to kick him out," answered Joe. "So at night," said George's father. There was a short struggle and then a heavy bump, as if two bodies fell down on the floor. Then one voice said: "I say, Tom!" "Yes!" "How are you getting on?" "Well, totally the truth, my man kicked me out." "So did mine! I say, Tom, I don't like this inn, do you?"
