章节摘录

Part 7 Film Review Film review writing is not an easy job as many would think. You need patience to watch a film with a critical eye, know all the information about it and then write a detailed film review. A good review is not just a summary of a movie, but a critical description that examines why and how a movie works and whether the film succeeds in its presentation. When writing a film review, always consider who the intended audience is for the film and the audience you are writing for. You should remember that your writing is intended to be persuasive. Additionally, it should demonstrate clearly that you not only viewed the movie, but also read the novel or play which formed the basis of the movie. You should focus your review around a larger argument, such as why the film works or fails to work and what are both the successful and unsuccessful elements. Make sure that you have a major thesis and a set of supporting arguments. A good film review uses scenes and dialogues from the film to support its larger argument. Moreover, a good review focuses on whether and how a movie works and whether the reviewer recommends it. Finally, a good reviewer shows how a movie works both psychologically and intellectually. Watching a film is a pleasant activity, it is more pleasant than review writing. Writing a review requires attention to the process of creating a well-structured paper. If you want your film review to be well-written, you should follow these simple steps:

1. Watch a film with a critical eye. Write down the description of the most significant parts and details which you will include in your work. Don't forget to write down the time of a particular moment in the movie.
2. If you are asked to write some specific elements to discuss in the review, pay attention to these elements throughout the essay. Otherwise, include the most basic information on several elements which you think are the most appropriate for your paper.
3. Always include information on the director, main characters, historical period used in this film, editing and camera work.
4. Write an outline and a thesis statement for your film review. Be creative and hardworking so that you have chances for a good grade.
5. Start writing the paper from creating a strong argument that supports the ideas presented in the introduction and thesis statement. Remember to restate your thesis in the concluding paragraph with a brief summary of main idea of your work.
6. Edit and proofread your final review for errors and paper structure or ask someone to help you with this part of film review composition. ....
